You Possess My Heart

by Lamar Miller

The world is brighter for your smile (For me it is at any rate.)

My heart grows lighter all the while-(At least the times I am your date.)

Love draws us tighter in a winning style (Especially when the hour is late!)

Star dust is whiter in a wedding aisle-(How much longer must we wait?)

Your Handwriting by Ellyn Lee

Each of us would like to have an attractive personality. But many of us seldom do something constructive about those characteristic traits which prevent us from "putting ourselves across" successfully. If you want to know what makes you tick, your own hand writing contains important clues to YOUR personality. An analysis of your handwriting will reveal your best qualities and your handicaps. You can fool your family, friends, and even yourself. But your handwriting shows you as you are.

Dear Rose Mary M.:

Whether or not this boy is truly in love with you cannot be determined from handwriting. While pen strokes reveal mental and emotional make-up, temperament, character traits and abilities, personality analysis from handwriting is scientific and has nothing to do with so-called fortune telling.

Your boy friend's handwriting shows a fairly mature person of nineteen. Yes, he has an affectionate disposition. If he tells you anything in all seriousness, he is sincere. But of course when the question of love pops up you should use your own judgement and also give your heart a chance to help you decide.

He is a young man with ideas, but does not lose sight of the value of being ore letailed ouscription it is descussing with practical. If he indulges in daydreaming, it is nothing to worry about. Very likely he is making plans for the future. No doubt he seems impulsive, but this is mostly because he is quick in thought and in action.

See those long, determined-looking t crossings? These, combined with the even slant of the letters and with other formations show that he knows what he wants, and is willing to make the necessary effort to get ahead in the world.

Generally he is likeable, friendly, sociable, dependable and easy enough to get along with. His disposition is not exactly like an angel's; some irritability is shown, as well as some impatience. But he must first have a good reason for letting off steam before he indulaes in temperamental tantrums. Of an affectionate disposition, he hides his deeper feelings only from those with whom he does not feel at home

Your own handwriting reveals the fact that you have more of a tussle with your emotions and temperament than he has with his. You are moody, somewhat sentimental, inclined to be easily hurt and are more impulsive than your boy friend.

On the other hand, you have your settled moments too, and can be very sensible and practical. In your own We tall'me he was

" think the laws m way, you are ambitious, and you like being independent. You are inclined to be serious-minded, and although not over self-conscious, greater self-assurance would help you to acquire more poise.

Yes, you do have the ability for work requiring patience for routine and attention to detail, so you are on the right track taking the business course. Being generous and sympathetic, you have no problem in winning and keeping friends. Don't let it trouble you if some young people do not appreciate you as you are.

WHAT'S ON YOUR HEART?

A Personal Problems Department Conducted by Mrs. Laura Brown

When things go wrong, or you are uncertain what to do, are you alone with your problem? If so, let Laure Brown help you with wise and sincere friendship and sympathy. Mrs. Brown is a well-known authority on personal problems, and her advice has helped many. Letters will be answered only in this column. Your name will not be used. No matter what your age or how puzziling your problem, write to Mrs. Brown—freely and straight from the heart.

ADDRESS: Mrs. Laura Brown, c/o Darling Love, 241 Church St., New York 13, N.Y.

PROBLEM: Two years ago, when I was seventeen, I became engaged to a boy I loved, but whom my parents idin't like my going with boys, anyway. After three months, I gave back the ting because he was dating another girl, and I wanted him to be happy.

For over a year after that I didn't date any boy, boping the boy I loved would come back to me. But be didn't. Then I met another boy and we had tome very nice times together. We didn't want to fall in love, but it happened.

When my parents found out how much I liked this boy they objected to my dating him. And a month ago my mother gave me two weeks time to stop seeing him. But I don't think that's fair. Isn't a girl of nineteen old enough to have her own friends and date boys?

Walt is just finishing school, and we are willing to wait until be it shrough and gets a job before we get married. Since my parents raised such a fust, I've been meeting Walt servetly. But this bothers we. Are we doing wrong in not leiling my parents of our plans? I'm afraid they may tell me to give him up.

Patricia S.

ANSWER: At nineteen a girl is certainly old chough to choose her own boy friends and think about matriage. It is hard to understand why some parents lack in understanding in this respect. If you and Walt are really in love, and he is not undesirable in any way, why keep your intentions secret? Tell your parents the truth and face the music.

You don't want to hurt them, of course. Their attitude may be prompted by overprotectiveness on their part. Talk things over. Give them a chance to get well acquainted with Walt. Surely they must realize that you intend to marry some day.

PROBLEM: No girl of eighteen should feel like an old maid, should she? But that's my problem, and I'm very unhappy. I'm average in looks, out of high and in my first job.

I meet plenty of boys and try to be friends with them, thinking that it may lead to love, but the boys always start dating other girls and give me the brush off. I've checked on my appearance and personal daintiness, and am told there's nothing wrong. What can it be?

I'm considered anice girl, and often boys tell me Pll make a good wife for some man. I belong to a church club, and there's a boy there whom I like wery much. He's twenty, and when be's not with another girl, be takes me home. I like him so much that it's on the fip of my tongue to tell him so. Will I ever find someone who will really fall in low with me?

Gloomy Gloria.

ANSWER! How or why the first attraction springs up between a boy and a girl, is still a deep mystery. To some it happens sooner than to others. But it is really foolish on your part, my dear, to feel so discouraged. Eighteen is not really as ancient as it seems to you.

While every normal girl's heart longs for romance, there are no set rules as to how she can win a man's love and devotion. The "technique" that wins varies because all of us are not poured into the same mold. We may be fundamentally alike, but every person is different and is attractive in his or her own way.

Next time you are with this boy, or someope else, encourage him to talk about himself. At the club or any social gathering, concentrate on boys who seem lonesome. As for this young man, if you have reason to believe that he likes you, keep right on being friendly. Ask some of your other friends for a social Sunday evening at your home, if you can, and invite him. That may help.
